

we're still children

well I'll be peter pan, you'll be tinkler bell let's pretend that we're still children, that the world does wish us well that together we'll discover, the way it feels to fly and never have to worry, as we soar up in the sky we won't ever tell a fairy, that we do not believe that you're a magic princess, planting fairy seeds that when we wake as flowers, showing petals filled with light that they won't show your heart, and light a fairy night so who plays captain hook, and his friendly crocodile? well they're both played quite well, by the fear behind your smile you say that you're quite grown-up, no longer are a child yet you play the innocent, for it lets you stay quite wild don't you tell the fairy queen, that she cannot be real for she holds all the secrets, that we both want to feel to play as if we're children, as once we used to be we want to feel her magic, as we chase our grown-up dreams who cares who's the villain, for he helps to take us back to that time that we got love, and never had to ask we want that once again, though the years keep passing by the magic of our childhood, when sweet fairies kissed our eyes come here fairy princess, for I love to hear you sing sing to me a song, do make the heavens ring! share with me your music, and I'll remember why I always see such magic, in the light of your sweet eyes
